One battalion, including companies D, K, L and M, is from Philadelphia. They were supplied with good cars and traveling conditions.

The Brill Car works today shipped over the Pennsylvania lines from here a full train load of automobiles, army transports and auto stake wagons, 21 in all, and contained to "somewhere in Texas," presumably El Paso.

A sleeping car attached to the train carried army officers and chauffeurs, who will assemble the trucks at their destination.

Announcement was made today that recruiting will be stopped here for the present, as all the Pennsylvania companies have been recruited up to their full strength.

Considerable stir was caused here today by the report that the members of the Women's Preparedness movement, assigned to meet the troops that pass through here, had given the members of the first city troop all the delicacies at the R. and O. Station last night, and that the other fellows had to take what was left. This proved a false rumor, however, as the women turned over all the sandwiches and other things to eat to the commissary heads with orders for equal distribution.

He knew that she was seriously ill, but her death was not expected.
